Forecast For Northwest England
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0400 on Thursday 14 Jan 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Cold and wet for Thursday with snow possible.

Today:
A largely wet day across the region with a prolonged band of rain accompanied by sleet and some snow during the morning. Wintry conditions remaining through the afternoon. Maximum temperature 5 deg C (41 deg F).

Tonight:
Any remaining rain, sleet and snow turning light during the evening and dying out later. Rather dry and cloudy night with some lingering showers for the northern areas. Feeling cold. Minimum temperature -2 deg C (28 deg F).

Friday:
A mostly dry and cloudy day for most, some wintry showers for the northern areas, clearing later in the day. Low cloud arriving for later. Wind strengthens overnight. Maximum temperature 6 deg C (43 deg F).

Outlook for Saturday to Monday:
Wind, rain and hill snow on Saturday, heavy at times. Sunday mostly dry with sunny spells. Monday rather unsettled with possibly heavy rain.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.